Office of Graduate Research	Research and Employability Skills Training (REST)	Research and Employability Skills Training (REST) is a structured program formally embedded into the higher degree research. It will replace the current Research Higher Degree Professional Development Program (RHDPDP) with structured online courses and workshops that will be formally documented. It will extend the current research and academic training program to include transferrable skills, such as innovation, critical thinking and time management, as well as help students focus their training on their career ambitions. It will also enable students to identify their training needs and plan their professional development journey, in turn equipping them with the ability to articulate and demonstrate their skills upon completion through formal certification.	$60,000	$62,000
Transition Office	Peer Assisted Study Sessions (PASS), Pilot Program	The Transition Office aims to run Peer Assisted Study Sessions (PASS) in semesters 1 and 2 in 2019. These sessions are intended to assist students to improve their understanding of the content of more challenging university topics (e.g., with a historically high failure rate) and to further develop their academic skills and connect them with their peers. The PASS program will be offered in six topics in the Colleges of Nursing and Health Sciences, Education, Psychology and Social Work, and Business, Government and Law.	$50,000	$51,500
Student Experience	Flinders Support Network (FSN)	The Flinders Support Network (FSN) is a communication intervention strategy that is designed to increase undergraduate student retention and success by providing (just-in-time) personalised and proactive engagement with students. The aim of the FSN program is to reduce student attrition and enhance their course progress through meaningful interactions with the right services and support, encouraging and enabling their continuation and success at Flinders. Using a data analytics' predictive model that forecasts the students' likelihood of withdrawing from the University, the FSN takes the form of a timely phone call/ email/ SMS from suitably trained Contact Officers (comprised of Flinders student ambassadors and staff), to students identified within the at risk category. The Contact Officers will "case manage" each student by either assisting them as appropriate and/or directing them to support services across the University, including follow up to check that the student has received the help they need.	$50,000	$51,500
